

COMPLETION

general definition - when you've set the finish line and then you were able to cross it; a benchmark that is then met or surpassed.

definition used the past three years - the deadline, the due date, or the point where sleep and sanity is more valuable than the deliverable.

SOMETHING IS COMPLETE WHEN...

you* are satisfied.

*You, your client, your professor, your Mom aka those you matter to the task in question.

PERSONAL
COMPLETED:
my third 10k race.

- it felt complete because I crossed the finish line.
- I was on cloud nine and very happy to have completed it.
- it was a high level of completion because I did it with a personal record but I felt as if I had trained even more before the actual race the level of completion would have been even higher.
- my first 5k race brought about this change to really set challenges for myself and set out to conquer them.

A large crowd of San Francisco Giants fans is shown celebrating. The scene is filled with a thick shower of orange and white confetti falling from the sky. In the background, a multi-story building is visible. The crowd in the foreground is dense, with many people wearing Giants gear like orange hats and jerseys. Some fans are holding up their phones to take pictures. A wooden structure, possibly a stage or a viewing platform, is partially visible behind the crowd. The overall atmosphere is one of joy and excitement.

NON PERSONAL

COMPLETED:

“... and the Giants win the penant!”

- it was completed because the 2014 MLB season was over.
- there was a high level of completion because the team went all the way through the entire season and won the World Series
- because of this completion and the way it ended San Francisco fan rally amongst one another, celebrating, and then the anticipation settles for what next season will bring or the next team they can cheer for.

NON PERSONAL COMPLETED: Mercedes-Benz Fashion Week

- every designer that was scheduled to present did and the shows are over in New York
- with the end of every New York Fashion Week the world of fashion springs into motion; after New York, London, Paris, and Milan set their sights on their own ways to display the latest collections and the industry filters down the trends, colors, and styles that were presented into things they can easily replicate, mimic, or be inspired from to implement in their own way to sell to consumers.
